

Is the Platinum Plunge Over?

By Blake Robben (Aug 15)

You would think that a metal that is 10 times rarer than gold and has numerous industrial applications would find value somewhere below production costs. However, extreme negative investor sentiment and a massive build-up in short positions has pushed platinum prices to eight year lows.

Let's look at the ultra-long term charts to gather a better picture of this technical set-up. Good Day and Trade Well My Friends!
